Steuben Welfare Department Is Praised By Governor Lehman For Handling of Flood Relief Work

No Real Physical Suffering in Steuben County — Co-operation of Town and Local Welfare Officers Commended by Commissioner Hardenbrook.

Outstanding relief work has been accomplished in Steuben County within the past few days since the visit of storm and flood left unestimated damage in its wake, according to E. Ray Hardengrook, Steuben County Commissioner of Public Welfare, who points out that while floods are usually accompanied by much human suffering, Steuben County had but few deaths and no real physical suffering.

"Maybe refugees slept in armories, public halls, or temporary quarters, but they all had shelter the night after the flood", Mr. Hardenbrook stated "and very few of them missed more then one meal".

Property loss, mental anguish and shock of the disaster have been much in evidence, he stated, but there has been no starvation or famine, no loss of life from exposure and no ill effects from exposure and no ill results from lack of medical care. Sanitation measures are being carried out, food is being supplied as well as clothing and shelter and the communities of Steuben, while hard hit, are thankful for the relief made available.

Steps taken by the County Welfare Department to have all its agents and town welfare afficers distribute relief unstintingly to flood refugees, look after registered relief cases and take care of emergency cases, resulted in complete control of the situation so that Governor Herbert H. Lehman on his visit to Steuben County, praised the department for its work.

Flood districts were contacted by car and sometimes by foot to ascertain needs. Welfare Officers were assured of authority to go ahead with their work. Valuable assistance was rendered by the press in notifying committees of what was available. Food and clothing were obtained from the Federal Surplus Food Director at Rochester. Men and machinery were recruited from every available source for work in cleaning up after the flood. Financial assistance was promised by highest state authorities.

On his visit to the flooded areas a few days ago, Governor Lehman complimented the department on its prompt and efficient work in the emergency and expressed the hope that other agencies would take up the work of settling families back in their homes, finding new homes for those without shelter and assisting in reclamation work. Local organizations, the Red Cross and similiar agencies he inferred, might do this.

While it does not mean the adoption of a new policy, the Governor said, the State, on Federal sanction, will carry the extra load of expense to which the county will be put, during the emergency period of a few weeks.

The fact that essentials were supplied to victims on the dot, was due, Mr. Hardengrook states to the complete cooperation of Town and City Welfare Officers, local organizations which jumped into the breach. He, himself, visited every stricken community walked and waded into isolated rural areas, and had complete knowledge of the situation as it developed. Not only the matter of furnishing food, clothing and shelter was attended to, but also the authorization of extra men on clean-up work was obtained from the State T. E. R. A. This involves 1,000 men.

Swimming Pool Formed By Flood Washout

The creek bed on the east side of the village bridge was washed to a considerable depth during the recent flood and with the aid of bags of gravel taken on a raft, a dam has been constructed across the creek a short distance below where a large swimming pool has now formed.

Roy Gill To Establish Cleaning Service at Lyons

Roy N. Gill, proprietor and manager of the Addison Dry Cleaners service on Wombough street for the past year and a half, will leave Addison in approximately ten days for Lyons, N. Y., where he will establish a new and up-to-date Band Box cleaning service.

A new Ford truck for collecton and delivery purposes will also be included in the equipment with which the new establishment will open in Lyons.

In a statement to the ADVERTISER yesterday, Mr. Gill expressed a desire to thank the people of Addison for the liberal patronage with which he has been favored here. Only the greater opportunity afforded in the new location impels him to leave Addison, he adds.

It is hoped that the people of Addison and vicinity will respond liberally to this humanitarian project and that a large group of children will have cause to remember the first two weeks in August as the bright spot in an otherwise drab existence.

It should be borne in mind that each child is given a thorough physical examination within twenty-four hours of departure from New York so the danger of illness is reduced to a minimum.

Farm Bureau Surveys Damage From Flood

Flood damage done on Steuben County farms is being surveyed by committeemen of the farm bureau, in an effert to locate needy cases that require help to put their farms in workable condition, and to appraise the total losses suffered.

State and county relief and the Red Cross officials in conference with farm bureau officers Friday afternoon indicate that some help will be available for the repair of buildings and the removal of debris in cases of severe damage and where the amount of material to be removed from farms, the straightening of creeks and similiar work that cannot be done by hand labor, and where the farmer is unable to finance the needed repairs.

"The repair of buildings and the removal of debris and that type of work can be done of course only by those organizations with the necessary finances, labor and equipment," states Murray Barnes, farm bureau president. "The farm bureau has volunteered to organize this work in the rural sections, to collect information of the amount of damage done and to find the most needy cases. No definite plan of the amount of help to be done by the relief agencies can be made until the survey is completed."

Farmers in distress or who have suffered extreme damage are urged to report directly to the farm bureau office at Bath, or to the local farm bureau. These cases will be brought to the attention of the various relief agencies, and every effort will be made to get the work of rehabilitation started promptly.

Plans Taking Shape For Big Convention of NY-P Firemen's Association in Addison

Public Meeting to Be Held in Welles Hose Rooms Monday Evening — Cooperation of Citizens is Requested to Make First Annual Event a Big Success —Approximatley $200 Yet Required to Complete Convention Fund.

Plans for the first annual convention of the NY-PENN Firemen's Association, to be held in Addison, August 14th and 15th, are rapidly taking form, according to John M. O'Keefe, chief of the Addison Fire Department and chairman of the committee in charge of convention arrangements.

In a statement to the ADVERTISER yesterday, Mr. O'Keefe stated that a public meeting would be held in the Welles Hose Rooms in the City Hall, Monday evening at eight o'clock to discuss preliminary plans. This meeting will be open to anyone interested and it is hoped by the local firefighters that a large number of citizens will manifest their interest in the undertaking by their presence at the meeting. A tentative program for the two days will be worked out and consideration will be given to the problem of finance. Approximately three to four hundred dollars will be required to defray the expenses of the banquet for the delegates, the prizes, fireworks, etc., of this amount, about about one hundred and fifty dollars has already been raised by holding a fair in the City Hall and two block dances on Valerio Parkway following the Saturday night band concerts.

The New York - Pennsylvania Firemen's Association, comprising about twenty-five fire companies in Tioga and Potter Counties, Pennsylvania, and Steuben and Chemung Counties, New York was organized at a meeting in Addison last October. The association was organized for the purpose of establishing a spirit of fellowship among the firemen of this region, to afford a forum for the discussion of mutual problems and the means of meeting, getting together in social groups. The officers of the association are: president, John W. Kennedy, Avoca; secretary, R. C. Kennedy, Avoca; treasurer,L. W. McCarthy, Corning; vice-presidents, John M. O'Keefe of Addison, Ray Call of Chemung County, A. R. Rugaber of Tioga County and R. Kennealley of Potter County.

The first annual convention of the new organization will be held in Addison in recognition of the initiative of Fire Chief O'Keefe and others of the local fire department in the forming of the organization. The first day of the convention will be given over to meeting of the delegates with a banquet in the evening. On the second day, the parade, prize drills, races, band concerts, etc., will be held.

Bank Annex To Be Taken Down; Structure Cracked By Destruction of Retaining Wall

Big Portion of Wall Slips Away Monday Evening—Gas Pipe Beneath Sidewalk is Cracked by Stress From Sagging Base and Gas Fire Results From Lantern Signal—Building to Be Reconstructed.

Hope of saving the annex to the First National Bank, threatened last week when sections of the retaining wall at the side and rear of the building were torn away by flood waters of the Canisteo River, was virtually abandoned Tuesday, following further slides which destroyed practically the entire wall from the river bridge to a point well in the rear of the bank building. Destruction of the wall caused the supporting base of the building to settle, with the result that a large crack developed in the upper portion of the annex with smaller cracks appearing in several other places.

The slides which destroyed the latest portions of the retaining wall occurred at about nine o'clock Monday evening. It is stated that M. S. Root had just left the lunch car conducted by Ernest Shelanskey and had started across the river bridge toward the bank when he heard the crash of falling stone as further sections of the wall gave away. Mr. Root returned to the lunch car and reported the matter to a group seated there, which included Preston Ferris, Addison contractor, William McCarthy and others. Ray S. Brown, president of the bank was contacted and came to the building to supervise the removal of furniture and records from the annex. A hastily assembled force of workmen under direction of Preston Ferris placed sandbags along the river to form a bulwark against further encroachment of the waters under the river bank.

A gas fire intervened to add unexpected excitement. Unknown to the workers and to assembled onlookers, stress created by the sagging walls and annex had snapped a gas pipe beneath the sidewalk in front of the bank. John Bullock one of those assisting happened to place one of the red lantern danger signals down on the walk and suddenly a burst of flame sprang up along an open crack extending from the corner of the bridge to the front of the annex. The flame was extinguished only by bringing a foamite extinguisher from the fire department in the City Hall.

About four o'clock Tuesday morning, Walter Aldrich, on guard in front of the building, heard a further breaking away of the river wall and shortly thereafter, a cracking sound as the upper portion of the annex was ruptured. Observers yesterday commented that the break had apparently widened a bit during the preceding twenty-four hours.

When questioned yesterday, Ray S. Brown, president of the bank, stated that all hope of saving the annex was now abandoned. It will be necessary to take the structure down, he added. As to the possibility of rebuilding, Mr. Brown implied that the annex would be reconstructed provided that a diking is erected to afford protection from future ravages of the Canisteo River. The question of diking is a matter for the state to decide, but it seemed to be the consensus of opinion about town yesterday that the state would not hesitate to take corrective measures at the earliest date possible, particularly in view of the fact that the river in its present unwalled condition presents a threat, not only to the annex of the bank but to the main section of the building adjoining, also to other buildings in the Main Street section.

Feed Hay Carefully, Advises Department of Animal Husbandry

The following letter with reference to the growing of emergency forage on flooded lands has been received by Frank B. Finnerty, agricultural instructor in Addison High School, from the Department of Animal Husbandry at Cornell University. Mr. Finnerty's inquiry from the state college was prompted by the numerous inquiries which he received from farmers in this region. ,

The letter reads as follows:

Mr. F. B. Finnerty,
Agricultural Instructor,
Addison, N. Y.

Dear Sir:

We are in receipt of your letter of July 15th with reference to emergency forage crops to be grown on land that had been flooded and on which corn has been killed. We are referring this part of your letter to the Agronomy department.

With reference to the use of hay from fields that have been flooded, I am glad to state as follows:

If the hay is not so dirty that stock will not eat it, I believe that in all probability there will be no a long list of expert "barnyard golf" addicts. These contests will start August 27 and will be concluded August 28. The contestants are de-

JUGGLED FACTS

The nimble pen of the editor of the Canisteo Times was busy a few weeks ago drafting two articles intended to convince the people reading his paper that Steuben supervisors made a gross mistake in letting any county printing out on competitive bids. Most people are little interested in what printing shops do or do not get the county printing, but they are vitally concerned in tax costs, whether the money be spent for printing or other materials used for conducting their public business.

The trouble with Mr. Latham's premises are, he selects an isolated, unusual circumstance upon which to try to build a defense for the spoils system and, at the same time, cast discredit upon Forrest Loper, Supervisor of Jasper, to whom is probably due the fact Steuben County is buying part of its printing on bids. It is true a printer able to depend upon individual, small jobs, like the primary petition blanks, coming into his shop year after year, can hold the form and print it for a price that would be ruinous to the shop which set the job up for one run. Yet that fact should not close the door to the further truth Steuben County is actually saving money by taking competitive bids on printing. The Addison Advertiser secured the job of printing the Supervisors' Proceedings this year for a page price which totaled $1,122 for 645 pages. The county has paid over $1,500 for this job with less pages, when it was let as a political "handout".

Of course a competitive bidding system removes a few crumbs of printing out of Bath and Canisteo, which communities, have evidently considered they owned all this county business. Yet an unbiased person might realize there is some manner of fairness in that also, for there are taxpayers in Addison as well as in Canisteo and Bath; whatever money comes into Addison for county printing is largely paid out in labor and Addison people have to have some means of a livelihood just as well as those in the County Seat.

It has been noticeable for some time that the Canisteo Times has taken frequent "shots" at Supervisor Loper. This latest outburst indicates the barrage from the upper end of the river was released because of Mr. Loper's activity in behalf of economy measures in Steuben County. It is not the purpose of this publication to rush into a controversy to defend every person attacked, but the issues were so misleadingly overdrawn and the reason for the slurs at Mr. Loper so obvious, the Advertiser is glad to give the many readers of Southern Tier News papers in Jasper and all southern Steuben County the facts.

Sometimes to print an isolated truth, causes contrary facts to be greatly juggled.

SOLENE

Many a flyer perishes in a crash which would only bruise him up if his fuel tank had not burst into flames. Now this constant peril to air-minded folks may soon be eliminated with a new, non-explosive fuel called solene.

Solene was made by solidifying gasoline by a Prussian-born chemist named Adolph Prussin who has ben experimenting with fuels for six years. Five years ago he went to the Guggenheim School with a solid fuel that ran a test engine for a few minutes. Despite the fact this demonstration was not a complete test Guggenheim officials were interested and six months ago gave Prussin facilities for further research. Last week his efforts seemed to be crowned with success.

Solene is a friable substance which looks like greasy brown sugar. It was used to power a small, three-horse power test engine of one cylinder, running at 1,200 r. p. m. Heat conveyed from the exhaust vaporizes the solene and it is then drawn into the combustion chamber without benefit of carburetor. The clear exhaust indicates almost complete combustion, and although there is no test data yet to prove it, scientists believe this fuel will materially increase the flying range of planes; giving greater fuel economy in all combustion motors.

The quest of scientists for improved substances is better than a tale from the Arabian Nights. One discovery rapidly leads to another and the needs of this hour will almost surely be unfolded by restless minds on the morrow. Flying at the start was one of the most hazardous and foolhardy undertakings imaginable, but with the steady improvement in plane designs, fabrication of new construction metals and rapid development of the internal combustion engine to meet the needs of flying men, the risk has been gradually decimated until many people consider flying less dangerous than driving a car through congested traffic. The commercial production of solene can conceivably minimize the present risks of going aloft.

If solene proves as economical as its inventor believes, it may prolong the period our available oil supply can satisfy the needs of the country. Alarmists lately declared present consumption rates of gasoline would exhaust our fields in a few years, with no new sources in sight of geologists. Before we get too excited over a gasoline shortage it is well to remember scientific developments such as late improvements in the Diesel engine, are now promising to make the supply go farther. It is reasonable to expect scientists to eventually evolve a method of recovery of nearly all the oil from pools under ground, instead of a small percentage, as in the past.

Those who mourn for the days of miracles are both deaf and blind. Greater miracles are being worked out every day by science, than the ancients ever dared to dream of, let alone ask for. We are in the days of miracles. To watch them unfold gives joy and zest to life which makes our own age the most attractive period of any the world has ever seen. One scientific step leads to another and new vistas are opening up that beckon us to the far horizons to see what is next in store for us to behold.

Will the impossible happen at the Democratic national convention next June, and the party refuse to re-nominate the man who received the biggest vote ever cast for President? The idea seems fantastic, yet is being toyed with by numerous news sources throughout the country and might develop into a concerted movement resulting in a stampede of the convention.

The truth of the matter is, Mr. Roosevelt has commanded the votes of Congressmen pretty generally through his administration, but for the past few months these gentlemen have supported most of the executive's legislation from the standpoint of party loyalty rather than heartfelt desire to go along with the President's shifting point of view. Most Democratic representatives and senators have a deep regard for true Democratic principles, regardless of the fact they were swept into office by Mr. Roosevelt's personal appeal, or the atmosphere for change which permeated the air in 1932 and 1934. They have usually voted according to the executive's wishes, because of hidebound custom and fear of loss of patronage which would cripple their own chances of re-election. But right now a new thought is developing in both houses of Congress, a thought lately reflected in the President's defeat on the Utilities Bill which forecasts a slight chance there may be someone besides Mr. Roosevelt heading the Democratic ticket next year.

Democrats like Senator Byrd of Virginia, Senator Glass and many others it would be easy to name, are strong party advocates but, they are loyal American citizens more devoted to the welfare of their country than to the emblem under which they have long held office. Many of these men have openly declared on the floors of our two branches of Congress that the Roosevelt doctrines are not Democratic doctrines. They are fully fed up on government by bureaucracy, even though the bureaucrats have the label of their own party. They honestly believe Mr. Roosevelt is a dangerous man under whose continued leadership we may be led to a new form of government, far less desirable than the Democracy under which this great country has grown and prospered through more than a century and a half of progress.

They know it would be flirting with political death for themselves to openly oppose the renomination of Mr. Roosevelt, yet being true patriots and implicit believers in the real doctrines of the party they have long followed, a few of these men are not afraid to turn against the President whom they are sure has turned his back on Jeffersonian Democracy. Such men appealing to the large conservative group in their party may reasonably gather quite a large block of delegates pledged against Mr. Roosevelt; a block large enough to prevent the President's renomination on the first ballot. But Mr. Roosevelt is himself a pastmaster in the art of politics, and he has for a right hand man Jim Farley, the slickest political trickster that ever juggled delegates. In order to actually beat the President in the convention, these friends of the Republic must develop far more strength than now is in sight.

The election may prove a far different matter. If the attempt to "beat Roosevelt" in the convention focusses on a conservative candidate, it is not likely that man failing to win the nomination would attempt to run independently. However, if one of the radical Democrats like Long or Wheeler, should be the storm center then a third party would almost surely be thrown into the national field.

In any event there is plenty of dynamite being hitched to the fuse someone will touch off in the Democratic convention next June. Whether the biggest explosion will come then, or in November, '36, only time and Mr. Roosevelt's moves of "left, right; left, right; left, left, left, right; left, left, left, left, left, will tell.

The Tax Confusion

By WALTER LIPPMANN

THERE is yet no evidence that the Administration has any clear idea of what it wants to do about the tax program. The President, in his message of June 19, put all his emphasis upon a better distribution of wealth and economic power. Only in one clause did he refer to the budget and then only to say that the inheritance taxes would "incidentally assist in our approach to a balanced budget." But the latest reports from the House Committee say that "we must have a bill that will raise substantial revenue" and that this means at least $340,000,000. Which is it? Until Washington makes up its mind whether its primary purpose is to redistribute wealth or to balance the budget, it cannot begin to legislate intelligently. Nothing but trouble can come from confusing the two purposes.

Let us suppose that the primary object is to balance the budget. Is it not self-evident that the time to discuss new revenues is when the new budget is presented next winter? What is the point of discussing taxes until it is known what the expenditures are to be? The whole purpose of a budget is to enable the country to consider its expenditures in relation to its revenues and its revenues in relation to its expenditures. When a budget is in balance or is being balanced, the first rule is that no money must be appropriated for which revenues are not provided. It is no less contrary to orderly budget practice to raise revenues which have no relation to expenditures. It leads to such absurdities as the suggestion that the government must immediately have $340,000,000 more to reduce a prospective deficit of over $4,000,000,000. Why $340,000,000? Would a deficit of $3,660,000,000 be in any real sense different from a deficit of $4,000,000,000?

The proposed new revenues will not balance the budget or bring the balance into sight. The only effect, therefore, of imposing new taxes now is to add to the burden of a few thousand individuals without lightening in the least the burden on the national finances. Burdensome taxation that does no one any good is just stupid and arbitrary.

The only wholesome way to impose new taxes is to impose them as part of a comprehensive plan to bring the budget into balance. Opinion is divided as to whether it is necessary or wise to balance the budget at once. But if the budget is to be balanced at once, then new taxes should accompany retrenchments. To add to the taxes without beginning to economize will not balance the budget: it will merely produce the worst results of both policies. It will not give business men and investors the confidence that a balanced budget would give them and yet it will have the deflationary and discouraging effect that a meaningless sacrifice involves. What could be more dispiriting than to be taxed drastically without making a dent on the deficit? Taxation of this sort is merely punitive. It hurts the income taxpayer and helps no one else.

My own view is that no new taxes should be imposed until after the budget is presented to Congress next winter. That budget ought, I believe, to contain a definite program to reduce the deficit drastically next year and to end it soon thereafter. Such a program depends upon reducing the cost of relief and reducing the cost of relief depends primarily on putting the unemployed back to work in private industry. Now when this problem is examined, it will appear, I believe, that given the recovery necessary to absorb a substantial part of the unemployed, the present tax rates will yield very large revenues.

It is not generally realized that the present tax rates are already producing larger revenues than the government received in any year from 1923 to 1928. They were nearly 80 per cent larger this year than in 1932; they have produced $3.70 this year for every $2.10 they produced in 1932. The trouble with the budget, therefore, is not in the tax rates. The trouble is in the expenditures and in the fact that business is only partially recovered. A recovery which makes possible a reduction of expenses will also, without raising the tax rates, increase the revenues.

If the Administration will concentrate on recovery it can readily balance the budget. If it will not concentrate on recovery, it will not balance the budget merely by raising the rates.

An eventual revision of the tax system is desirable and necessary as a matter of a larger public policy. It should include more steeply graduated income and inheritance taxes. But these new rates should be imbedded in an income tax system which covers at least as large a proportion of the voters as are covered by the British income tax system. In 1931-1932 there were 3.7 million persons who paid income taxes in England, Scotland and Northern Ireland. This was about 17 per cent of the voters in the 1931 election. That same year in the United States 1.9 million individuals had taxable returns. They constituted less than 5 per cent of the voters in the 1932 election

An income tax system set up so that not more than one voter in twenty pays a tax, that not more than one voter in ten even files a return, is a dangerous one to invoke for the purpose of breaking up large fortunes. It is wide open and without defenses against extravagance and the squandering of the large accumulations of the nation's capital. Those large accumulations ought eventually to be taken out of private hands. But they cannot safely be entrusted to a legislature elected by a population which is not conscious that it pays taxes. An electorate containing 10 million income taxpayers may hope to redistribute income without destroying capital, but an electorate in which income taxpayers are a negligible number is under constant provocation to squander capital on current political expenditures.

In short, we may conclude, I think, (1) that new taxes for revenue should not be considered apart from a budget which retrenches and (2) that new taxes to redistribute wealth should not be considered apart from new taxes to redistribute responsibility among a very much larger number of income taxpayers. Since Congress is not now ready to deal with either question in this fashion, this is not the time to legislate.

Congressional Democrats Seek For Their Rights

By MARK SULLIVAN

That something highly important has occured in Washington there is no doubt. What it is can be stated thus: The Democrats in Congress took control of the party as against the extremely personal control heretofore exercised by President Roosevelt.

What will develop from now on is influenced by too many factors to permit confident generalization. The Democrats in Congress will try very hard to compromise with the President. They are certain to wish to preserve him in respect and prestige as the de facto head of the party. The Democrats know that normally it is highly desirable for them to go into the campaign next year with Mr. Roosevelt as their candidate for President. Some Democrats feel that the party should nominate a different candidate, but this idea will not grow unless Mr. Roosevelt by his course compels it to grow. If Mr. Roosevelt is willing to make any reasonable arrangement, the Democrats in Congress will greatly prefer to keep him in a kind of titular leadership of the party, with the Democratic leaders in Congress acting as in effect a regency in actual control of the party. If this happens, it will be a conformity to the American political tradition and the condition contemplated by the Constitution, in which the President is not superior to Congress.

Whether Mr. Roosevelt will accommodate himself to some such adjustment depends on whether he can adopt the Democratic leaders in Congress as his intimate advisers. So far he has preferred to have around him men of the type who compose what is called the "brain trust." Whether the "brain trust" will have to go is the most interesting speculation in the present situation. To get rid of them is one of the objects of the proposed Congressional investigation into whether one of the "brain trust" tried to intimidate a Congressman by threatening that unless the Congressman voted for the "death sentence" in the public utility holding company bill, he would be deprived of any credit for or association with expenditures for public works in his state.

The probability that the "brain trust" must go does not by any means rest on that incident alone. The distaste of Congress for the intimate advisers around the President rests on many counts. The Democratic Congressmen, plain men, accustomed to certain taken-for-granted standards in their relations with other men, have come to regard some of the intellectuals with the deep distrust that men of direct minds have for men of oversubtle minds. Congressmen think that some of the intellectuals wrote hidden meanings into the statutes which Congress passed because the measures came from the Administration, but which Congressmen would have been reluctant to support had they realized the full meanings of the measures. Congress feels, as many others do, that the intellectuals tried to practice a similar evasiveness with respect to the courts.

Only by getting rid of the "brain trust" can Mr. Roosevelt be preserved. The substance of what came to a climax recently was distaste for measures which the Administration had sent to Congress. Those measures originated either with Mr. Roosevelt personally, or with the advisers around him. Only by blaming the measures on the advisers, and then getting rid of the advisers, can Mr. Roosevelt be preserved in prestige.

There is one condition which will trouble the Democratic leaders. They did not make their revolt until after the Administration had sent to Congress some measures which, in their existing forms, are plainly unconstitutional. Some of these measures have been passed. More are on the list which the Administration regarded as "must." From the standpoint of the intellectuals, it was a case of the more unconstitutional the better. It was undoubtedly the intention of the intellectuals. and also of Mr. Roosevelt, to have next year and later a titanic controversy over the Constitution and over the power of the Supreme Court.

The anticipation was that the Supreme Court next year would hand down decisions invalidating some of the measures recently passed. The further anticipation was that such decisions would be unpopular and would serve as the starting point for a campaign against the Constitution and against the power of the Supreme Court. But the Democrats in Congress who have just revolted are not in sympathy with that enterprise. If they keep the ascendancy they have just gained, and if they succeed in making a working arrangement with the President, the latter will be obliged to abandon the plan for a great campaign to make fundamental changes in the Constitution.

Johnny Smith Whiffs Fifteen Batters and Limits Opposing Team to Six Hits at Austinburg

Keed Hibbard's Speedball Kings Chalk up Sensational Performance in Little Six Engagement — Ralph Wade Strikes Out Four in Two Innings — Hib's Sluggers Pelt Twenty Hits to all Corners of Field.

Big Chief Harold Hibbard and his Addison Mohawks stormed into Austinburg Sunday afternoon and unleashed the fury acquired during their long losing streak. Doubles and triples rained from the bats of Jim Kelly, Ralph Wade, Joe Dominick and other Redskins. Johnny Smith, the Keed's fireball ace, was in the pink of form and held the Quaker Staters to six scattered blows, finding it convenient in between time to send fifteen of them back to the bench via the strike-out route. Ralph Wade, who followed him on the Rubber, added four more during the last two innings.

The first two frames started off in one-two-three order and looked like a pitchers' battle up to this point. In the next session, however, Hib's men staged an ambush and pushed five runs over the pan. From then on they scored in every inning except the fifth. Altogether, the Mohawks accounted for twenty safe blows and what is more, they brought a satisfied smile to the Keed's countenance by playing errorless ball in the field all the afternoon.

Small Towns Must Serve a Need Or Die, Avers Professor Mather

Rural Sociologist Points Out 75,000 From Farm Population of State Were Lost Between 1920-1930—Better Inter-Community Progress Will Be Won, He Says, By Towns That Advertise "Buy in Blankville—Where Goods Are Cheapest and Goods Are Best".

Is Addison a Rip Van Winkle town? Horseheads is not, according to a caption which appeared some time ago in the Horsereads Reporter, that community's enterprising weekly newspaper. The entire article, being of apparent interest to countless numbers of rural residents, particularly those who have been forced to wonder what the future holds for the smaller communities, is reprinted herewith.

Horseheads is not a Rip Van Winkle town, according to William G. Mather, Jr., of the Department of Rural Social Organization of the State College of Agriculture at Ithaca, who sees it growing in size "because city people are coming out to live in it". The future of the small town without a nearby city to draw from is uncertain, and they must awaken or die, he holds.

"Small towns have been hit hard in the last twenty years, and the question of their survival is a very real one", he finds, after considerable study.

"In 1900 we had 22,672,000 acres of land in farms here; we had in 1930 only 17,797,000—a loss of almost 5,000,000 acres from cultivation in New York State in thirty years. How many farmers we have lost we do not know, but we lost 75,000 people from our rural-farm population from 1920 to 1930.

"Naturally, all this means that agricultural towns have been having, and apparently will have in the future, fewer farm customers to serve than in the old days. There are fewer farmers to buy shoes and hats and candy and salt and lumber or what have you. We will not need as many business men to serve them as we did.

"The same process is going on now that went on when those stores were first formed—a need exists, and a store answered it; a need ceases to exist, and the store dies. In one case the town grows; in the other, it declines."

"But small towns close to cities are finding an opposite force at work. They are growing in size. "City people are coming out to live in them. We had an increase of over 200,000 of them in New York State in the ten years from 1920 to 1930. They are going to save the necks of a lot of small towns," he says.

Professor Mather finds that "an appalling number of little New York towns have lost heavily in the last few years by raising funds to be given to half-bankrupt pully works, knife factories, airplane factories, woolen and silk mills and the like, as inducements to come to Podunk and die.

"For all three types of small towns—agricultural, city suburb, and manufacturing—there exists, however, the inexorable law that they must serve a need or die.

"There is a bitter struggle on for the farmers' trade among small towns today. That struggle will not be won by the town that advertises, 'Buy in Blankville, your home town'; it will be won by the town that advertises, 'Buy in Blankville, where goods are cheapest and best'."

Chevrolet Sales Best in Years

Detroit, July 11,—Chevrolet sales and production in June were the largest for that month since 1929, W. E. Holler, vice president and general sales manager, reported today. Sales in the United States totalled 97,862 units. Total production, including Canada and export, was 122,300.

"These figures," Mr. Holler announced, "not only surpass the sales and production totals for any other June since 1929, but with a single exception exceed the highest totals for any month in years.

"For the third time this year, June gave us a monthly production in excess of 100,000, the other two months being March and April. In no other year since 1929 has even an entire year had three 100,000 car months such as this year already has at the half way mark.

"As we enter the second half of year, we have already built more than 60 per cent as many cars as we produced in all twelve months of 1934—a year in which Chevrolet startled the industry by registering more cars in the last six months than in the first half.

"Sales of the Master de luxe models in June greatly exceeded Standard model sales. However the lower priced Standard models, improved this year with the addition of the Master blue flame engine, is a tremendous success. To date, 1935 Standard sales show an increase of 107,727 units over the same period last year."

GREENWOOD

Greenwood was not seriously damaged by the storm of the past week. Some gardens were washed and country roads made impassable. Rock Creek road, Erskine Hollow and Dryden Hill were washed full of stone and gravel with deep gullies cut so new roads had to be made in some places. W. G. Kellogg, county superintendent and Chauncey Earsley town superitendent have been very busy placing men and doing road work where most needed. Lightning struck the M. E. Church steeple, doing some damage, then followed the aerial and entered the parsonage damaging the pastor's radio. No lives were lost and Greenwood is much better off than many other places.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl B. Carpenter of Woodhull visited Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Miller one day last week, when all called on friends in Canisteo and drove to Hornell to see the stricken flooded district.

Prof. Walter Redmond left last week to attend summer school at Cornell University.

Robert B. Miller of Purdy Creek called on his brother, J. K. Miller and wife Saturday afternoon.

Murdock and Hale worked night and day trying to accommodate the patrons, making 73 cheese in one day and 222 in four days.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dean of Naples called on his aunt, Mrs. J. K. Miller one day recently when on their way to Chautauqua.

Miss Mary Egan of Buffalo has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. George York and other relatives for some time since her health is not so good in the city.

Hotaling Shines at Bat And on Mound For Cardinals Against Traditional Rivals

Woodhull Star Poles Homer, Triple and Single to Lead Onslaught Which Crushes Last Year's Champs—Adds to Aces Cup of Grief by Turning in Brilliant Mound Performance—Woodward's Homer Brings Solace to Jasperites.

A tall blonde, stick and curve artist, identified by the name of Hotaling, stole the show in Sunday's encounter between the Woodhull Cardinals and the Jasper Aces. The big boy clubbed home a homer, a triple and a single against the erstwhile mighty Aces. Apart from that, he took his regular turn on the mound and held the Jasperites well in tow throughout the fray, nine well-scattered blows being the extent of their hitting for the day. Hotaling's performance, coupled with some effective cooperation on the part of his mates, gave the Cards an 18 to 5 victory over their old rivals.

Bob Swan, who undertook the pitching task for the Aces, was driven to the showers in the third. Moore relieved him and held the Red Birds in check for an inning or two. In the fifth, however, Hotaling and his consorts cut loose with another onslaught which did not cease until nine runners had crossed the pan. In the sixth the Woodhull assemblage placidly accepted another gooseegg, but at that stage it didn't matter.

Woodward, guardian of the midway station for the Aces, smacked a home run with one on base in the third to give Jasper its only scores from the offerings of Hotaling. Three more were added by the Aces in the seventh after Bob Drake had taken up the pitching duties for the Cards. Horton, lead-off man for Woodhull, also turned in some good work at bat. Burdette Drake, in centerfield, made a fine peg from the outfield to nip a runner at the plate.

The summary:

Tanners Gain 3-2 Decision Over O'Keefe's Charges In Spectacular Game Sunday

George LaChance Continues Hitting Frenzy With Four More Safeties—Arguments Follow Close Decisions in Which Addison Runners Are Called Out — Grange, in Throes of Hitting Slump, Whiffs With Two Aboard—Stowell Comes Through in Ninth.

The Elkland Tanners, first half champs in the Tri-County race, were the attraction Sunday at Tuscarora Field. The Tanners have been traveling high, wide and handsome during the year to date and while they managed to carry off the decision in Sunday's engagement, it was only by the narrowest of margins, 3-2 being the final score.

The Elkland management changed its strategy at the last moment and inserted Enderly, last year's Tioga pitching star, on the slab instead of Freburg. The game was replete with spectacular plays and the result was in doubt until the end of the ninth.

Elkland scored in the first when E. Caffo singled, Mulaski hit to first and was safe on an error. A moment later Caffo scored on a fielder's choice. Addison retaliated in the same session, however. Hewson, Beers and LaChance singled in succession to knot the count for the local Tri-Cos.

In the third, Enderle hit safely, Caffo was intentionally walked and Mulaski singled, scoring Enderle to give the Runners their second run. Swan flied to Beers, Dorn struck out and Darby grounded to Beers to end the short-lived uprising, for a brief spell in the fourth, it looked as if Addison was destined to tie the score again. Hadlock singled and Robbins was hit by a pitched ball. Hadlock, however, had been nipped off first while Robbie was at the plate. Maurice went to second on a passed ball. Charles Hickey singled and on the closest kind of a decision at the plate, Robbie was called out.

The Tanners pushed over their third and final run in the seventh. Darby received a base on balls. Caffo hit to Charles Hickey at short. The throw to first was a trifle wide and LaChance was drawn from the bag. George touched the passing runner, however, but dropped the ball in the bargain. Much argument ensued as it was contended by the Addison players that Caffo had not touched the base, being apparently unaware that LaChance had dropped the ball. Nevertheless, the umpire called him safe. The decision cost the Addison team a run as Darby crossed the pan during the melee and two men were out at the time.

In the seventh, Beers and LaChance singled in succession, Beers stole third, Hadlock flied out, Robbins receiving a free ticket, and Beers scored on a wild pitch. It looked like a big moment for Addison with men on second and third and the heavy hitting Grange coming to the bat. But John fell down on his assignment and the side was out.

Again in the ninth, O'Keefe's charges staged an impromptu rally. Hewson grounded out and Hovey lined to third. LaChance rapped out his fourth hit of the day and Sowell came through in the pinch by socking a dazzler to right. LaChance went to third on Stowell's hit and on the play at the hot corner, Harold dashed for second, hoping to stretch the clout to two bases. On another close and doubtful decision, Stowell was called out, thus ending the ball game and Addison's hopes of victory.

termined through county elimination contests.

The horse pulling contest, which has grown tremendously in interest during the past few years, is always popular with farmers. This event, started a few years ago, has become one of the most interesting features of the fair. One contest is for teams of 3,000 pounds or over and the other for teams under 3,000 pounds, will pull this year on the race track in front of the grandstand on August 27 and 28.

Indian squaws, braves and papooses from the seven reservations in New York State are cooperating this year in making the Indian Village at the New York State Fair, August 25 to September 2 even more interesting, attractive and instructive than ever before.

Under the direction of Dr. Erl A. Bates, of Cornell University, these members of the ancient Iroquois Confedracy will portray to present day agriculturists and other fair visitors, how their tribes have adopted the methods of the White Man and at the same time compare their primitive system of agriculture with the modernized, scientific methods in effect today on all the reservations.

During the past few years the Indian Village at the fair grounds has been gradually enlarged and extended, until now it consists of several permanent buildings and tracts of land. On the latter the Indians grow the same grains and vegetables as did their forefathers hundreds of years ago.

Alex White, of the St. Regis-Mohawk Reservation, at Hogansburg, N. Y., is superintendent of the department and is assisted by committees from each of the seven Reservations.

Page Ripley! Here's a Hen That Turned Into A Rooster!

Page Believe-It-Or-Not Ripley! For a rooster that insists on being a mother has joined the movies. The unusual fowl was found in Scott Valley, in Central California, during the filming of farm scenes for the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "Hide-Out," which opens Sunday at the Avon Theatre.

While the strange parent was attempting to hover over twenty-two fluffy chicks, Director W. S. Van Dyke noted that it had a large red comb and typical rooster plumage.

"It's a rooster!" declared Van Dyke. "Look at its comb."

"It's a hen," Maureen O'Sullivan argued. "Can't you hear it clucking?"

"You're wrong—its a rooster," said Robert Montgomery. "Look at those tail feathers."

Miss O'Sullivan refused to be swayed. She wagered dinners for Van Dyke and Montgomery that it was a hen.

"If it ever crows, I'll buy the dinners," she agreed.

On the second day, while scenes were being taken in the chicken yard, the "hen"—a haughty white bantam—threw back its head and released the most masculine crow ever heard in Scott Valley — and continued to crow half the morning.

"The dinners are on me," Miss O'Sullivan agreed.

State Champions To Be Crowned At Syracuse State Fair in Aug.

Spelling Bee a Feature—High School Bands to Compete Before a Nationally Known Judge—Singing, Horseshoe Pitching and Horse Pulling Also Hold Much Interest.

Five state champions in various branches of sport, skill and knowledge, will be crowned at the New York State Fair, August 25 to September 2.

One of these will be a state-wide spelling bee in which the best spellers from practically every county in the state will compete. Elimination contests are now being held in the various school districts throughout the state, the winners of which will be sent to the State Fair competition. The contest is conducted by officials of the New York State Education Department and cash prizes are given the winners.

Another state wide contest for high school boys and girls will be the band contest. It is a new feature. Before a nationally known judge these high school bands will play in Empire State Court five afternoons, August 26 to 30.

The singing contest for Grangers is state wide competition that arouses much interest. This contest is staged in Grange Hall and is for quartets or larger groups of singers. The participants select old time songs and are dressed in the period in which the song was popular.

The horse shoe pitching contest, sponsored by the American Agriculturist, is another that always draws trouble from feeding it. I discussed with Dean Hagan and Professor Birch of the Veterinary College the question as to whether there was apt to be any poisonous effects from feeding such hay, and that they had no definite knowledge of trouble from such a cause. In other words, we do not believe that there would be apt to be any difficulty from poisoning due to growth of mold or bacteria during the flooding of the meadows.

Dr. Birch mentioned that if there had been losses of cattle fed such hay following previous floods, it might possibly be due to infection from anthrax, which as you know, is a fatal disease. The germs in this disease are particularly apt to be found in liw-lying land, and might have been carried to the particular field from an infected area during the flood.

I should feed such hay rather carefully at first and watch the animals closely to see whether there are any bad effects.

Very truly yours,
F. D. Morrison
